

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to command their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of pressing partisan political views and the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy.

The FCC will hear about this decision.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them.
